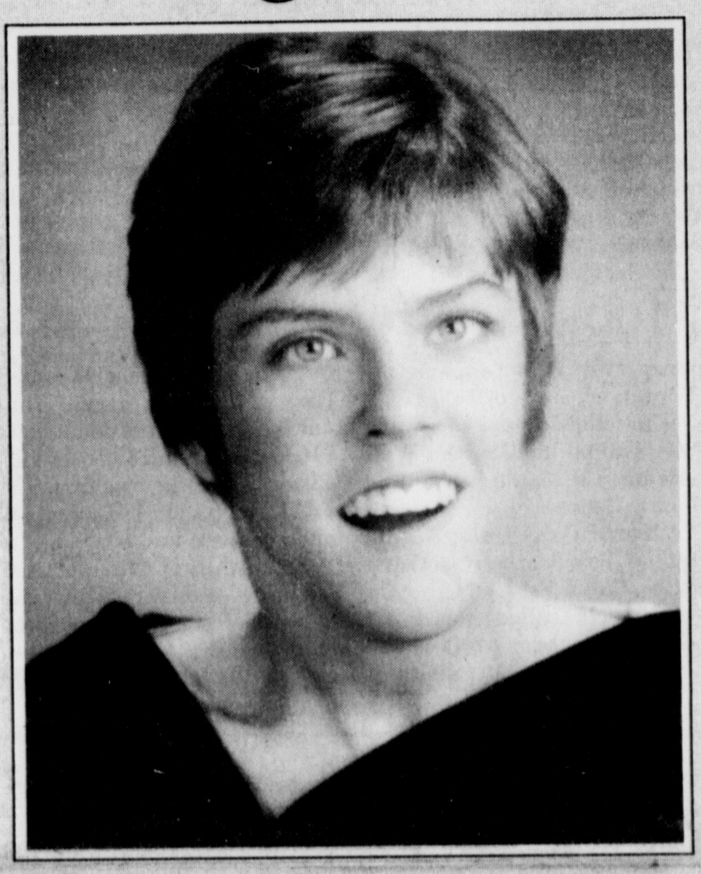
Best wishes from song star:

Katie Goeden gets a call

By Daryl Fisher

One of West Sacramento's most popular citizens is young Katie Goeden, the 19-year-old daughter of City Manager Joe Goeden and his wife, Nola. Katie recently underwent a very serious surgical procedure to stabilize her back. She has scoliosis, or curvature of the spine, and after various therapies and braces failed to correct the problem, doctors decided surgery was the only option left. Two medal rods were inserted down Katie's back, from her shoulder blades to her hip, effectively preventing any worsening of the condition. She will have to wear a special brace for approximately six months, and even though some curvature will remain, doctors proclaimed the surgery a success.



KATIE GOEDEN

In an effort to keep Katie's spirits up, a number of West Sacramento City employees got together and came up with an ingenious plan to contact world famous entertainer Gloria Estefan, who happens to be Katie's very favorite singer. With the help of Carol Richardson and Cheryl Doan, a letter was created asking Ms. Estefan if she would consider giving Katie a telephone call after she returned home from her surgery. Mayor Wes Beers signed the letter and with the help of friends in the music business in Los Angeles and one of Ms. Estefan's band members, the letter finally reached the singer. "When Gloria called," explained Katie's father, "we immediately put her on the speaker phone in Katie's room and the two of them talked for a good 15 minutes. It was almost like they were old friends. It turns out that Gloria had similar surgery after the automobile accident she was in a few years ago which almost took her life. So she told Katie about the brace she had to wear and how long it took her to start feeling better. She's a very kind lady, and she even knew how to pronounce our last name."

Katie told the News-Ledger, "I knew her voice right away and we talked for a long time. She's very nice and my favorite songs of hers are `Coming Out Of The Dark', `Reach', and `Get On Your Feet'."

'Just like Gloria Estefan, Katie is a real fighter,' said her dad, City Manager Joe Goeden.

Katie, who was born with cerebral palsy and undergone a number of surgeries in the past, is a graduate of River City High School and plans on attending Sacramento State University when her recovery from the operation is a little further along.

Her father said, "Just like Gloria Estefan, Katie is a real fighter, and my wife, son, and I are very appreciative of everyone who helped make the phone call possible. Katie has always drawn strength from Gloria's songs, which talk about the need to be strong and courageous, and the phone call was just what the doctor ordered."

HP donation to help find kids

The Hewlitt-Packard Company announced in December that the West Sacramento Police Department is one of 16 Sacramento-area law enforcement agencies to share in a $110,000 donation of equipment to help locate missing children.

The company donated the computer equipment as part of the "TRAK" (Technology to Recover Abducted Kids) program.

The TRAK systems "aid in the recovery of missing children by enabling law enforcement personnel to create and distribute colored flyers to other agencies and the media within a matter of minutes," said a Hewlitt-Packard spokesperson.

"It's my opinion that if you do not recover that child within the first two to four hours, in all likelihood you are going to have a deceased victim on your hands," said Gordon McNeill, supervisory agent with the FBI's child abduction unit, in a Hewlitt-Packard press release.

The TRAK system includes an HP Vectra personal computer, an HP color inkjet printer, an HP scanner and modem with software developed by SocialTech, Inc., a San Mateo-based non-profit organization.

A photo of the missing child is scanned, automatically enhanced and placed on the flyer by using the system's software. The flyer can than be printed with photographic quality or transmitted electronically.

Law enforcement agencies receiving the donated equipment include the Citrus Heights, Folsom, Galt, Lincoln, Rocklin, Roseville, Sacramento, Woodland and West Sacramento police departments; sheriff's departments of El Dorado, Placer and Sacramento counties; three divisions of the California Highway Patrol covering North Sacramento, South Sacramento and the valley; and the Sacramento Valley High Tech Task Force.

The systems will be delivered at a spring training session at the company's Roseville facility.

Agencies are already using the TRAK system to create "Wanted Person," "Registered Sex Offender Notice" (Megan's Law), "School Alert," and "Community Alert" flyers, as well.

River City doesn't make final round in 'blue ribbon' search

The Washington Unified School District has announced that River City High School will not be advancing to the final round of the U.S. Dept. of Education's "Blue Ribbon Schools" program.

R.C.H.S. was among 437 schools statewide, and the only one in the Sacramento area, to be nominated to receive a site visit from the federal education department, which will then choose among the finalists for its "Blue Ribbon Schools" honors.

Of the 437 schools nominated across the country, only 172 will receive site visits. River City was notified this month that it will not be among those 172 schools selected for site visits.

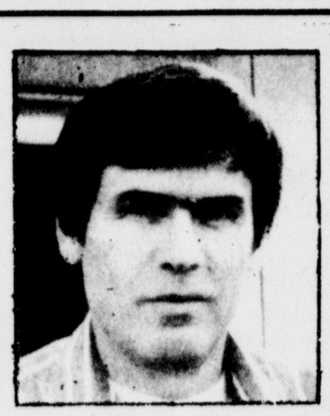
The media's favorite story: a sex scandal



I was chatting away the other day with an old friend of mine who owns his own business when the conversation somehow turned to the smutty White House sex scandal which has suddenly engulfed Bill Clinton and his five-year-old presidency. Now, for those of you have been vacationing on Mars for the past few weeks, here are the facts, fantasies, and allegations as my friend and I seem to understand them: In 1995, 21-year-old Monica Lewinsky went to work as an unpaid White House intern. While in that position (or possibly others) she became close to President Clinton and it wasn't long before she was telling her dear friend Linda Tripp (a former disgruntled White House employee who like all good friends was tape recording their conversations) that she (Ms. Lewinsky) was having sexual liaisons with Mr. Clinton. She also mentioned to Ms. Tripp that the president was giving her gifts, having late-night telephone sex with her, and had arranged to have his good friend and high priced Washington lawyer Vernon Jordan help her get a great job in New York City. And the only catch was that she was supposed to do a little lying during her testimony in the Paula Corbin Jones lawsuit (which alleges that our president exposed himself to Ms. Jones when she was a state worker in Arkansas and that she can identify distinguishing characteristics of the presidential genitalia).

President Clinton, of course, has publicly denied having a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky or encouraging her to lie about it. In fact, his exact words were, "I want to say one thing to the American people...I did not have sexual relations with that woman, Miss Lewinsky. And I never told anybody to lie, not a single time -- never!"

Anyway, as my friend and I were struggling to make some sense out of all this, our conversation went a little something like this: "Well, Daryl, tell me the truth, do you think the president did it or not?"

"Oh, who knows? It's definitely tasteless, though."

"But don't you think sleazy would be a better word to describe what went on than just tasteless?"

"Not really. No, I think a serious lack of taste goes to the very heart of this whole matter."

"Really? How so?"

"Well, wouldn't you'd think that the president of the United States -- the most powerful man in the free world -- would have a little better taste? I mean, there's really got to be a deep-rooted problem here if the poor man keeps finding women like Jennifer Flowers, Paula Jones and Monica Lewinsky attractive. Now you can say what you want about the Kennedys, but they at least were interested in women like Marilyn Monroe. No, if you ask me, I think Bill Clinton has taken presidential womanizing to an all time low."

"Then you're not particularly upset about the actual sexual aspect of the scandal?"

"Not really. I mean, if the constitution required all our presidents to be saints, we would have had to impeach men like Thomas Jefferson, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, just to name a few. No, I don't think we have too much to fear from presidents who have a roving eye and occasionally stray from the reservation. It's the ones who could care less about sex that really scare me. Richard Nixon pops to mind."

"You know," said my friend, "this whole thing really hit home with me the other day when one of the secretaries I've employed for years decided to retire so she can spend more time with her family."

"How so?"

"Well, I've been interviewing candidates to replace her and this one very attractive lady strolled into my office and boy, was she dressed to kill! Plus I think she was actually kind of flirting with me during the interview."

"Really? What did you do?"

"Well, I tried to keep it as professional as possible, but it sure wasn't easy. I told her to come back next week and we'd talk some more about the position. She's not necessarily the most qualified person I've interviewed, but I sure liked her. What do you think I should do?"

"Do you have internships?"

Kings' Korner

By Richard Novoa

The Kings (19-27) won eight consecutive games at the Arco but on Sunday night they couldn't hold off the division leading San Antonio Spurs.

The Spurs (33-14) were led by the twin towers (Robinson and Duncan) in their 103-97 victory over the Kings. Before a near-sellout crowd of 17,053, the Kings battled the Spurs' three 7-foot starting front line of rookie Tim Duncan (14 points, 12 rebounds), Will Perdue (10 points, 14 rebounds) and All-Star David Robinson (33 points, 18 rebounds) to a 90-90 tie in the fourth quarter.

But late in the game, the Spurs Chuck Person came off the bench, hitting a couple of three pointers with 2:39 left in the game to break the Kings back! Mitch Richmond scored game high 31 points for Sacramento as he gets ready for the NBA's All-Star game Sunday, Feb. 7 in New York.

The Kings' last game before the All-Star break will take them to Denver, to play the 4-40 Nuggets. They need to win this game to even start thinking about making the playoffs!

See ya at the Arco!

News-Ledger Editorial:

The internet as a tool for campaign disclosure

It may be too complicated to undertake a widespread campaign reform attempt for the city of West Sacramento right now.

True, big money will still be able to influence elections well beyond what is "fair." But despite limits on how much any one person can contribute to a campaign in West Sacramento, there are ways around this.

One way is to get around local campaign laws is to form an independent political action group to support a cause or a candidate. As long as your group does not work directly with that cause or candidate (or at least no one can prove it does), the group can raise money above and beyond what would be allowed if it simply contributed to a campaign.

No one yet has a credible way of preventing these abuses without also limiting free speech rights -- including the right to put up your own billboards or pay for your own commercials supporting an issue or person.

Despite all the things we can't do to reform politics, there is still one thing we can do without endangering these rights: we can ensure that the public finds out where the money comes from in every local campaign in a timely manner.

Computers and the internet can be a powerful tool for this disclosure. With the "net," it is easy for just about anybody to report their campaign finances almost instantaneously. This would be a vast improvement on the current system, in which a skillful campaign operator can receive tens of thousands of dollars in donations near the end of a campaign and not even have to report the money until after the election is over. If the public doesn't know who is funding one side of a campaign or the other, the public is missing a big piece of the puzzle in deciding who to support.

In fact, this has happened before in West Sacramento and will happen again. In 1990, out-of-town corporate money (including oil money) was dumped into a local industrial campaign, but although the West Sacramento public would certainly have been interested in this fact and in what it meant, the donations were legally kept secret until it was too late to affect the campaign.

While no similar hot-button issues appear on West Sacramento's horizon at this time, it is certainly inevitable that they eventually will. Whether we have the stage set to insist on early financial disclosure is another question.

The city of Sacramento is now considering whether to mandate that local political campaigns begin providing their financial statements on-line, so anyone with a computer and a modem can see where the money comes from. No doubt, this is the wave of the future in most jurisdictions.

The issue has also been broached locally. The question in West Sacramento is not whether we will eventually follow suit, but how soon and how smart.

Letters to the Editor

The real agenda

After reading in the local papers that there will be a special election to fill the seat held by the appointment of Juan Barcenas, I feel compelled to speak my feelings and those of many other parents with children in our district. I have a son that has gone to school in Washington Unified School District since kindergarten and is now in the 7th grade at Golden State Middle School. I consider myself an involved parent with his school and along with other parents keep informed as to what is happening with our children's education.

I resent Ms. Ohlson and her group who try to halt every inch of progress made by our district including the building of a new high school. Whatever her agenda is, it certainly is not for the students. Many students wonder why she is so bitter towards them when she does not even know them. Every time I see her name in the newspaper it is complaining about something our local government is trying to fix or deal with, but it seems her main focus is the schools.

The News-Ledger's editorial of 1/21/98 has provided the answer. Once again, you have supported her political agenda and informed us that her whole purpose is to gain back control of the school board. This most recent upheaval is all about power. I have heard that around the community for years, but now I have seen it in black and white. How sad that people who profess to care, jeopardize the quality of our children's education to further their own political cause. All in the name of power!

I hope Mr. Barcenas files for the June election to fill the seat he was appointed. Myself and many others believe he is the perfect person to represent our children. Besides, it would be nice to have some diversity on our school board. The majority of children in our schools are Latino and deserve representation. I think the Latino community will be upset that Mr. Barcenas's appointment has been terminated and I hope we hear from them loud and clear in the special election. I'll help make sure we do!

WE have a vested interest in the end product of our school district, our children. Do you?

A bench for Masood

Where's the school spirit? Where's the community involvement? I'm really "disappointed" in those that haven't helped! West Sacramento has lost one of its own, a "junior classmate," a "basketball player."

The main thing to remember is that this young man was a "victim" when he passed away. Do you think the citizens of West Sacramento to have pulled together and helped out yet! We all need to help out as a community. To me, we all need to pull together and show that Mastitis family is important in this community. We also need to show that "River City students" are there to back one of our students when someone goes down! Now is the time we should rally behind one of our own.

So if you would like to make a donation, drop it by the jug in the River City High School office. Let's show our school and community have the right spirit or you can mail a check to: Mastitis Bench Fund, City of West Sacramento Parks and Community Services, P.O. Box 159, West Sacramento, Ca, 95691. Thank you.

Little League responds on fees

The Board of Directors of West Sacramento Little League read with interest the letter entitled "Free Play" which appeared in your 1/21/98 edition. Let us say at the outset that each and every member of West Sacramento Little League is committed to making certain that every child has the opportunity to play baseball regardless of their ability to pay a registration fee. This has always been, and will continue to be, the case.

We would also correct several mis-impressions that may have been created by that letter. Raising fees for any youth program, when necessary, is never an easy thing to do. In this case, a great deal of thought was given to the issue. Prior to implementation, the fee increase was discussed at length at two general membership meetings and in the monthly newsletter that is sent to all of our members. Although by our constitution and bylaws such fees are to be set by the Board of Directors, a poll was conducted at our October 1997 general meeting on the issue. Sixty percent of those members in attendance voted in favor of a fee increase.

Contrary to the suggestion of the "Free Play" letter, registration fees in our league have remained unchanged for the previous five years despite increasing costs. While fees for some age groups have been raised this year, for 5-6 year old players (T-Ball) they remain unchanged at $40. Our league did have increased capital expenditures last year, including those devoted to field and facility improvements. However, significant expenditures were in each instance proposed at general membership meetings and presented for a vote. In each case the expenditures were approved by vote of the membership. This is hardly mismanagement of funds.

We do not think comparisons to other little leagues are particularly constructive. Each league operates under different circumstances and the level of services provided varies widely. However, while considering the fee increase issue we conducted an informal survey which indicated that even at this year's new rates, West Sacramento Little League's registration fees are among the lowest in the Sacramento area. Fees of $55 to $75 are not uncommon and fees of up to $150 are not unheard of.

All of this being said, the point of our registration fee adjustment is simple. For the overall benefit of the children, those that can pay should; those that truly cannot will never be required to. We want every child to play baseball. We are looking forward to all of our members working together to make sure this is another wonderful baseball season. WE encourage everyone to volunteer, get involved, and come to our meetings to express their opinions. If you want your child to play but cannot afford part or all of a registration fee, please contact Player Agent John Cabral (372-6637) or any other member of the Board of Directors and arrangements will be made in private.

Little League: spends too much

I am writing about the unnecessary rising cost of West Sacramento Little League registration fees, and why I believe the WSLL Board of Directors is responsible.

The average fee for a child to join WSLL, not long ago, was $35 per child with a discount given to sibling sign-ups. The cost has been increasing annually, and now the cost for our senior league players is $60, and $50 for little league players. The Board of Directors decided to discontinue the discount to siblings. Apparently, the Board of Directors haven't realized that WSLL is a non-profit organization, and not a fundraiser!

I used to spend a lot of my time attending membership meetings, coaching various teams, and one year I volunteered many hours organizing and managing the WSLL Christmas Tree lot. My point is that little league has always been a non-profit organization, run solely by volunteers, and I see no reason why it should be any different now. I believe that if the money was managed well there wouldn't be reason to raise the WSLL registration fees. WSLL has enough money to see us through the next year without raising the cost of registration. I have kept up with the treasury reports, which clearly indicate my point of view. For example, last year's March and April reports show that WSLL had $26,000 on opening day after having paid-out for uniforms and equipment. Where has the money gone? I don't believe it's been embezzled, but I do question, where has it gone?

I noticed in past years before registration, WSLL had started the new seasons with five to ten thousand dollars in the bank; that is not an account balance in need of raising registration fees.

The WSLL Board Members control our money and any decisions in regards to WSLL. As I question how our little league's money is being spent, I hope you do, too. Here are some examples of spending I have learned about through the treasury report or other source:

Every year, Board members have dinner on us. In addition, we paid a volunteer board member to repair his tractor, we now pay volunteers for running the snack bar, and furthermore, we even have paid for score-keeping.

I will be first to admit that these volunteers are very dedicated and work very hard; however, the monetary payment of a volunteer is wrong. Volunteers work for the pleasure of giving of oneself to their community, and the rewards of watching our children play ball. That's what it's all about.

Last year, some citizens spoke out about how unhappy they were with the WSLL Board because there appears to be a close "click" within the members and outsiders were having a hard time getting in to make some changes. The Board of Directors made a change, but they didn't replace a board seat they created a few more seats and now the voice of the new members are as silent as before because the new members are still outnumbered.

My last question is, who will be paid next, and for what? The WSLL is carelessly taking from our community's children.

Re-route buses

Last week I spoke with an elder gentleman from our Southport area who used public transit and wanted to see service for Southport improved. As I have been arguing for several years, the most cost-effective way to achieve this goal is to modify our 6:__ and 9:__ p.m. weekday #41 YoloBus route thusly: 1) Have it turn right onto Park Blvd. off Jefferson Blvd. south; 2) Hang left onto Stone Blvd. eastward at City Hall; 3) Right onto Jefferson for the Southport loop; 4) Left at 15th Street and the rest as usual for a midday #41.

So instead of continuing to cut off Southport bus service at about 5:00 p.m. and arguing it would take another bus and driver, these modifications at these times would cost only 10 to 15 minutes extra each run and does not cramp a bus driver's scheduled since (s)he does not repeat that run an hour later.

And since Southport does not presently have weekend service, above logic could be applied to fill that void -- again, with minimal cost increase. For those not interested in the south loop, they could get off at Jefferson and West Capitol and use that 25 minutes or so for some quick shopping and re-board the #41 at Westacre and West Capitol. This would save time for our Bryte/Broderick neighbors on non-weekdays when the #40 -- serving them first from downtown Sacramento -- does not operate.

Maybe in the near future, we can just apply similar logic to weekday schedules and, in effect: 1) Eliminate the #39, since a near-hourly #41 would replace need for same; 2) Concentrate #41 on West Capitol/south, including Industrial Park area; 3) Eliminate the #210, while modifying the #40 route to serve that area plus the Broderick/Bryte area 7 days a week.

With Welfare Reform demanding we put more people to work, such responsible action must include adequately revised public transit, child care and expanded training for such work. Computer training, offered by the Regional Occupational Office, begins at River City High this week, Room 60, 5:30 - 9:30 p.m., Monday/Wednesday, or Tuesday/Thursday. Those interested in learning how to operate computers should go to that room at

I've lived here all my life and I always wondered why West Sacramento had a bad reputation, and Daryl (Daryl Fisher's column, News-Ledger Jan. 7) said it was because of the sneakers. I'm glad that he enlightened me.

I always look forward to reading Daryl's column and your editorial and thank you for including it in the News-Ledger.

Marna Miller: water issues

Taxpayers viewing of the water topic meetings put on by CalFed/Bay Delta, is similar to a shell game, put on by con artists on a street corners. Here in W.S. we have perspective of things from an underlings eyes, having to bring them up to snuff and pay for our mistakes and remedy them. Now we're fine. More powerful cities like Sacramento, have not had to answer to the Water Quality Control Board because of politics. They have been substandard for 20 years, but if you have a Cease & Desist Order issued and you study the issue, you do not have to do anything about what is wrong. You may pollute with a permit, pollute and pay a fine, pollute and get a warning, but the public has no access to the information which would open their voting eyes.

Bay Delta Advisory Commission (BDAC) meets and asks themselves who or what will run water in the future. They wonder how to fix all the problems and how to pay for everything. Here we know that each city and area should correct the problems they have created -- that is what we have had to do -- that is what is right, fair and responsible. Sacramento wants to cry "help" for ignoring their problems and using their redevelopment money unwisely. Their politicians put out tears from being short-changed by the federal government and circumstances, while not telling their citizens that they have used taxpayer's money to benefit projects built by people who help them.

These water issues are going to spend billions, mostly in paperwork and pipelines to send water down south. Asking us to pay for this in another bonding issuance when most of the Delta and water pollution problems can and may be handled at the local level, just shows their interest is in upping taxes rather than fixing problems. Prop 218 does not apply to water topics, as it is considered a public resource, so, you cannot vote on this issue -- you can only talk to those who are commissioners and the governor or chairman Mike Madigan (California Water Commission). Problems regarding water, other than finding new sources and maintaining water sources, could and should be put back on the culprits affecting the water.

Regional water quality control board is a big part of our problem, as it is manipulated by politicians. If you try to make things better, you will be fired, and if the governor gets too much flack from you not doing your job, you will be fired, like Mr. Crooks recently. So it always looks like the public trust is being guarded. The paper puts out little articles telling what's going on, but not enough for you to be informed about the inequities of the board.

Environmental Defence Fund representative Tom Graff asked about the State Water Rights Board decisions which have been promised for six years. Chairman Mike Madigan got on his cell phone and Mr. Johns, from the State Water Rights Commission, appeared in minutes before the commission telling how they have tried to get decisions made on rights, but are unable. They are also unable to decide what pollutants and whose responsibility it is to get rid of them. The governor and Madigan, along with other politicians, seem unable to enforce standards for pollutants, because people giving them money don't want them to.

Bromide, a natural appearing problem, and selenium, were brought up, while never mentioning the lack of study or comparison of heavy metal and other really harmful toxins in our water source and the health hazards they may be creating. There is a need to take care of the man-made problems before embarking on a quest to alter nature. Here's a spiritual note: there is a judgment placed on those who hurt the earth (Rev 11:18) and I know other cultures have similar beliefs. I'm not an environmentalist by nature, but I'm getting tired of bureaucrats that will not work with business to up-grade to better standards, as the federal money to do so is available.
